

Invisible for a Day

“It’s me!” “I’m over here!” “HELLO!!!” What’s happening, I don’t understand. “Hey guys it’s me.” “Don’t you recognise me?!”

During the holidays I went to visit my grandma who lives with my four cousins Racheal, Kelvin, Max and Tim. Racheal is the oldest and only girl in her family but she’s the oldest. Kelvin is the oldest boy and is one year older than me. Max is younger than me by two years and Tim is five years younger than me. The boys are very playful and the girl is like all other teenage girls.

Grandma took us for some lunch outside. When we finished my cousins were looking strange. I asked them, “Is everything okay?” and they answered, “Yeah.”

After we got back to my cousins’ house, they were acting weird like in the café. Then, they suddenly started calling out for me and I called them telling them that I was here. They didn’t seem to hear me so I stepped over there and touched Racheal on the shoulder. But she didn’t seem to turn around. After this I walked in front of them waving my hand in front of their face but there was no response.

When they went upstairs, I followed them. We got in the room but they didn’t seem to notice me. I said, “Hello, I’m over here!” But they still seemed to not notice me. I was wondering did anything happen after lunch but I couldn’t think of any plausible explanation. Even though they didn’t notice me, I still played and watched. I kept this going until after I came out from the shower.

When I came out from the shower my cousins were screaming, “WE JUST PRANKED YOU!!” I was surprised when they said that, but then I started laughing along with them.

At the end, nothing happened. It was only a prank, a very smart prank. But I got over it. “Today was a very fun and interesting day.” I thought to myself. “I’ll never forget this day.”
